Product description

Pointe du Raz is a rugged headland in Brittany, where the land meets the vast Atlantic. Counted among the Four Great Sites of France, it marks one of the westernmost edges of mainland France. This painting captures the scene in the late afternoon, as the rocks shimmer with shifting hues of ochre, brown, violet, and countless shades of grey. Here, only the rhythm of waves breaking against the cliffs fills the air. On the horizon, the Isle of Sein slowly emerges, while the surface of the sea turns a delicate, pale pink. In a few fleeting moments, the sun will slip beneath the horizon, offering a quiet, luminous farewell to the day.
